TRAVEL & YOU

“ अतिथि देवो भवा...”

In India, we consider guests as God and treat them accordingly. As God is treated with reverence and respect, what we call as rituals, similarly the guests are also shown respect through some similar rituals. In Hinduism, these rituals comprise of five-steps which are known as Panchopchara Puja. These five rituals of worship similarly become the five “code of conduct” to be followed while receiving guests

- Fragrance/Incense (Dhupa) - The rooms must have a pleasant fragrance while welcoming any guest because a good fragrance will make a guest in good mood.
- Earthen Lamp (Dipa) – Lighted earthen lamp looks beautiful, fire is considered pious and also a source of light which disperses light so that everything between guest and the host is clearly visible.
- Eatables (Naivedya) - Fruits and milk-made sweets were given to guests for refreshments.
- Rice (Akshata) – Tilak is considered not only a symbol of warm wishes but also an expectation of well-being of the person on whom it is applied. Made from vermilion paste, tilak is put on the forehead and rice grains are placed on tilak. This is the most respectable form of welcome in Indian Hindu families.
- Flower Offering (Pushpa) - A flower not only symbolizes freshness and but is also a gesture of good will. It symbolizes the sweet and enduring memories of the visit between the host and the guest that stay with them for several days.

Fairs & Festivals

The colorful kaleidoscope of Indian festivals and fairs – as diverse as the land, is an expression of the spirit of celebration that is an essential part of the country.

Observed with enthusiasm and gaiety, festivals are like gems, ornamenting the crown of Indian culture. Packed with fun and excitement, festivals are occasions to clean and decorate houses, to get together, gifts, new attire, dance music and rituals, all add to their joyful rhythm. It is a time for prayer, for pageantry and procession... a time to rejoice...

Here are some of the major festivals which are joyfully celebrated in different parts of the land of festivities called; Incredible India...

Desert Festival

Famous for its Cultural events, camel races, turban tying competitions, even best moustache competition etc., desert festival of Jaisalmer also called as Rajasthan Desert Festival is celebrated in the Month of February.

Holi

Mainly celebrated in the northern part of India, this festival of colors falls in the later half of March month. The festival is celebrated in different ways around the country, the most famous one being in Mathura. Here, the festival lasts for 16 days, and is primarily played with flowers.

Rath Yatra

The Festival of Chariots of Lord Jagannatha is celebrated every year mostly in July at Puri, the temple town in Orissa. The presiding deities of the main temple, Sri Mandira, Lord Jagannatha, Lord Balabhadra and Goddess Subhadra, with the celestial wheel Sudarshana are taken out from the temple precincts in an elaborate ritual procession to their respective chariots.

Onam

Onam, the most popular festival of Kerala (a southern coastal state of India). This festival, is celebrated with a great enthusiasm throughout Kerala for a period of ten days. Every year this festival falls between August and September and also known as the harvest festival of Kerala. One can also witness the famous boat race during this festival.

Ganesh Chaturthi

This great Ganesha festival is celebrated by Hindus around the world as the birthday of Lord Ganesha. It is observed during mid-August to mid-September and the grandest and most elaborate of them, especially in the western India state of Maharashtra, lasts for 10 days.

Dussehra

Though celebrated all over India for a day, this festival is celebrated for ten days in Mysore (south India). A traditional Dussehra procession winds its way through the streets of Mysore, in which decorated elephants carry the idol of the goddess atop. The Mysore Palace is lit up this day with more than 1 lac light bulbs.

Diwali

Perhaps the most well-known of all the Indian festivals, Diwali is celebrated throughout India, as well as in Indian communities throughout the world. It is colloquially known as the "festival of lights".

Pushkar Mela

Held each November in Pushkar Rajasthan, at the time of the full moon, Pushkar Fair, is one of India's most highly-rated travel experiences, a spectacle on an epic scale, attracting more than 11,000 camels, horses and cattle and visited by over 400,000 people over a period of around fourteen days.

Dance & Music

Considered to be one of the oldest forms of classical arts, Indian Dance and Music traces its origins back to several thousands of years. Dance and Music is a part of the Indian life. Our day starts with the morning prayers in temples and at homes. Folk lore and hymns are sung in the praise of the Lord. Each region has its own way of doing it. The diversity of the same and yet the similarity of concepts makes India so unique.

Dance

Bharatnatyam

Bharatnatyam, a two thousand year old dance form, is one of the most popular classical dances of India and is more popular in South Indian states of Tamil Nadu and Karnataka.

Kathakali

The word Kathakali literally means "Story-Play". Kathakali is known for its heavy, elaborate makeup and costumes. In fact, the colorful and fascinating costumes of Kathakali have become the most recognized icon of Kerala. Kathakali dance presents themes derived from the Ramayana, the Mahabharata and other Hindu epics, mythologies and legends.

Indian Music Instruments

India's classical tradition has a variety of musical instruments that reflect original creativity, adaptive innovation and assimilation. Most of the Indian musical instruments have evolved over centuries which have contributed immensely in making Indian music famous. Some instruments are stringed ones, some are percussion ones, and some are wind-blown instruments. The music created by the instruments when played is absolutely melodious and is often used to relax the mind and the senses.

Sitar: The most popular stringed instrument, has been in use for about 700 years. It is fashioned from a seasoned gourd and teakwood and has twenty metal frets with six or seven playing strings and nineteen sympathetic strings below. It is played with a plectrum worn on the finger.

Flute: Belonging to the woodwind family, flute produces a sweet sound. A person who plays the flute is known as a flautist or a flutist. It is usually played in a vertical position. A flute produces sound only when a stream of air is blown through it, which bounces in and out of its numerous holes.

Veena: A stringed musical instrument of South India, this classical instrument is basically used to accompany Carnatic music. The Veena has been modified and refined over centuries and has been used since ancient times.

Tabla: A very popular percussion instrument, it consists of two drums called tabla & dagga (bayan) respectively. The treble drum (tabla) is generally made of wood and the top is covered with a stretched skin.

Shehnai: A popular musical instrument, Shehnai is believed to bring good luck and that is why in North Indian marriages and processions Shehnai is predominantly played. Shehnai is a tube-like instrument that gradually widens towards its lower end.

Music

Hindustani Gharanas

There is a rich tradition of Gharanas in classical Hindustani music. The music Gharanas are also called schools. These schools or Gharanas have their basis in the traditional mode of musical training and education. Every Gharana has its own distinct features.

Food & Delicacies

India is a diverse country and it can be clearly seen in its geography, people, culture, climate and even food. Each region of the country has something different to offer to its food lovers. Indian food lovers can taste each color of the region food in the Indian restaurant menu.

The unique taste and aroma of various ingredients make the Indian cuisine so special and popular across the world. The influence of rich tradition and culture can be seen easily in the traditional food of the country. The food of each region of the country has tongue tantalizing taste. Indian cuisine offers variety of mouthwatering dishes.

The food of north region is known as spicy and mainly vegetarian. Rajasthani and Punjabi food of north region offers a variety of spicy and delicious dishes. The popular dishes of Rajasthani food are Balusahi, Churma, Panchkoota, Raabdi, Jhajariya, ghever, Dal-bati, Besan-Chakki etc. while the popular curries are Beans Ki sabji, Keri ki sabji, makki ki raab, karele ki sabji and many others. Rajasthani food is cooked with Ghee and lots of nuts. Unlike other dishes, sweets are taken before, with and after the meal in Rajasthani cuisine. While in north region Haryanvi food is famous for its milk products. Milk and its products like, ghee, curd, lassi along with green vegetables like saag and others are the main part of food. Bajre ki roti is also very famous in Haryana. In Punjabi food, makki ki roti, saag, kadhi-rice, etc. are quite famous while the popular drink is lassi.

South Indian food is considered to be the spiciest. The famous dishes of this food are idli- dosa, masala- dosa, sambar- idli, coconut chutney, rice etc. Coconut is widely used in south Indian cuisine. There is one other thing that makes this food special is that it is served on banana leaf. Sea food like fishes, prawns etc. are main part of the meal. Most of the people like non- vegetarian in this region.

In West Indian food, Gujarati and Maharashtrian food is very famous. Popular dishes of this food are puran poli, puri, chapatti etc. While in rice based dishes khatta mittha bhaat, kheer, khichdi and pulao, in vegetables, potato curry, stuffed okra, French bean curry, chickpea curry etc. are liked.

East Indian cuisine is mainly based on root vegetables and rice. A number of dishes are based on these but cooking methods vary so the taste is always different.

Indian desserts are very tempting and mouth watering. Be it a scorching summer or a bone clattering winter indian mithai is always too difficult to resist. A sumptuous meal is always incomplete without sweet dish like gulab jamun or kulfi or gajar ka halwa. These are some of the desserts which must be tasted whenever you visit India.

Arts & Crafts

Arts and crafts define the cultural layers of a particular place, community and race. India, being a multicultural nation, is home to multiple cultural strata of cultures and traditions. A land of immense diversity, various traditions, rituals, geographic and climatic conditions, lifestyles and cultures India have given birth to numerous styles and designs.

India is a land abundant in raw materials that have lent themselves to the creative hands of the Indian craftsmen. From expensive materials like ivory, gems and marble; to cheaper ones like clay, cane and bamboo and wood, Indian handicrafts have an amazingly captivating beauty.

Rajasthan, recognized by its Royal heritage is also a prominent and well-established in craft industry. Craft workers see this not as an occupation, but rather a mark of respect to their heritage.

Some of the finest crafts examples of Rajasthan are; fabric colouration and embellishment, decorative painting and puppetry. Rajasthan is also famous for its block Printing and wooden handicrafts and lac bangles.

The hub of the stone craft in India is Agra and the supreme example of which is the Taj Mahal. The art of carving the thin marble slabs to make the fine lattice windows is the most difficult for the craftsmen. The other marble products available in Agra are mirror frames with lace-like fringes, fretwork balustrades, bowls, garden furniture, etc. The other specialty of the Agra is the inlay work on marble with the colorful and precious stones to form a multitude of mosaics.

After the Persian and Arabian carpets it comes the turn of our local carpets prepared at some of the cities of Uttar Pradesh. With the exotic designs of flora and fauna, Taj Mahal, "Kethariwala Jal", "Jamabaz", "Kandhari", etc. the industry has succeeded in attracting not only the national market but due to some attractive Chinese designs international market is establishing as well.

The background of the entire image consists of several vertical rolls of colorful, patterned textile. The patterns include geometric shapes like diamonds and zig-zags, as well as solid color bands. The colors are vibrant, including red, yellow, green, blue, and purple. A semi-transparent white banner is positioned across the upper middle of the image, containing the text.

Textile & Jewelry

Indian fashion is rich in tradition, vibrant in colors and truly beautiful. It reflects the country's cultural and ethnic diversity. Indian Fashion is in Indian clothes or Indian costumes, it's in accessories, in jewelry, in dresses, designs, & in makeup.

Indian Ethnic Wear

Dhoti Kurta; a traditional Indian clothing of men. It is an unstitched piece of cloth. The knot is tied at the waist. Kurta is a term used to refer to a long loose shirt, the length of which falls below or may be just above the knees of the wearer.

Indian Sari, one of the most wonderful dresses worn by Indian women. Women dress up in ethnic styles to embellish their look. Ethnic is classic and maintain the essence of our culture. Among women's ethnic wear, Sari is the most elegant and sensuous attire. The most brilliant aspect of this dress is that it looks good on all kinds of women.

Chikankari of Lucknow- Chikan embroidery is a specialty of the Uttar Pradesh city Lucknow. Its unique style was developed during the Mughal period. It is also called Lakhnavi Chikankari.

Banaras Brocade- Banaras is one of the richest weaving craft centers of India, famous for Brocade saris and all over dress material. A Banarasi Sari is virtually mandatory in the bride's trousseau.

Kashmiri Embroidery: (also Kashida), is as colorful as Kashmir. It is primarily done on canvas with crystal threads, but Kashida also employs Pashmina and leather threads. Kashida embroidery, which is famous for its sheer beauty, has attained the limits of fantasy and incredulity.

Indian Jewelry

The range of jewelry in India is wide as well as varied, India houses various kinds of jewelry arts, ranging from Meenakari and Kundan to stone and bead work. Emeralds, rubies, garnets, amethysts, corals, sapphires, and turquoises are among the stones which are used for the enhancement of gold and silver jewelry. In southern part of India, gold is considered auspicious and a status symbol.

Antique Jewelry - The jewelry which is not in mainstream production and of which the mode of production is no longer popular is known by the name of 'Antique Jewelry'. This kind of jewelry has dull and rough look, combined with an old world-world charm, and this serves as the major USP of such jewelry.

Bead Jewelry - Bead art in India is five thousand year old and dates back to the time of Indus Valley Civilization. People of that civilization used to make beads out of gold, silver, copper, clay, ivory and even wood. The excavations carried out there came out with finished and unfinished beads from the site.

Jadau (engraved) Jewelry - Jadau Jewelry forms one of the major examples of high skilled craftsmanship that was brought into India by Mughals. Historically speaking, the tradition of Jadau work has been in practice in the states of Rajasthan and Gujarat since the Mughal era.

Kundan Jewelry - During Mughal period, the art of kundan work reached Rajasthan from Delhi. Later on, craftsmen from the different part of the country migrated to the place and made Rajasthan a hub of Kundankari. Rulers and feudal lords gave patronage to the art and it developed into perfection.

Meenakari Jewelry - In Meenakari jewelry, precious stones are set and then enameled with gold. Historically speaking, the art was introduced to Rajasthan artisans by Raja Mansingh of Amer. He invited Lahore-based skilled artisans to his kingdom, and their intermingling with the locals craftsmen resulted in an amalgam.

A photograph of a grand, ornate interior space, likely a palace or museum. The architecture features multiple levels of arches (ogives) and a large, multi-tiered chandelier hanging from the ceiling. The walls are decorated with intricate floral patterns in gold and brown tones. The floor is polished and reflects the light. In the background, a red wall with white arches is visible through the central opening.

India is a land of diverse cultures. The greatness of India has been in accepting the best from all the invaders and intermingling the new customs and styles with the existing ones– this is visible in all aspects – be it music, dance, painting, sculptures, or architecture. Indian monuments are such a canvas of history which have displayed all the above beautifully

Thirty UNESCO World Heritage Sites in India boastfully speak of India's immensely rich Heritage and Culture..

Yoga & Ayurveda

A person is performing a yoga pose (Urdhva Dhanurasana) on a beach at sunset. The person is shirtless, wearing dark shorts, and is holding their feet with both hands, arching their back and lifting their hips. The sun is low on the horizon, creating a warm, golden glow. The person's right arm is extended upwards, and their left arm is bent, holding their right foot. The background shows the ocean and a sandy beach.

Originated in ancient India, Yoga and Ayurveda are like inseparable sisters. Yoga originates in the Yajur Veda, while Ayurveda originates in the Atharva Veda and Rig Veda.

"Ayurveda is the science and yoga is the practice of the science."

Drawn from an understanding of nature's rhythms and laws, ayurveda—the science (veda) of life (ayur)—is built around the five elements of ether, air, fire, water and earth. Yoga is a healing discipline that provides a practical method for integrating the body, breath and mind. The two complement each other and act to achieve harmony of the body, mind and spirit – which is the essence of true health.

Yoga and Ayurveda, both recognize that keeping the body healthy is vital for fulfilling the four aims of life: Dharma (duty), Artha (wealth), Kama (desire), and Moksha (liberation).

The Abode of Lord Buddha

India has always been a delight for tourists, especially those interested in history, culture and religion. For Buddhist tourists, India is the land of Buddha, for it was here, in a small town of Bodh Gaya, that the great prince Siddhartha attained enlightenment and became Buddha. Years later, it was again in India that an ambitious king Asoka renounced everything and took refuge in the preaching of Buddha. He sent his emissaries to different parts of the world so as to spread the message of peace and harmony and the religion of Buddhism.

In brief, it was from India that Buddhism flourished and found its way to the other countries of the world. Hence, a trip to India to know and understand Buddhism comprehensively is extremely important.

Gautama Buddha, also known as Siddhartha, Gautama, Shakyamuni, or simply the Buddha, was a sage, on whose teachings Buddhism was founded. Born in the Shakya republic in the Himalayan foothills, Gautama Buddha taught primarily in northeastern India.

Some of the famous Buddhist sights in India and Subcontinent are Mahabodhi Temple, Gaya, Bihar, Lumbini, Nepal, Sanchi Stupa, Madhya Pradesh, Sarnath, Uttar Pradesh, Kyichu temple, Taktsang monastery in Bhutan.

Travel Tips

- Your travel arrangements should be made well in advance, especially if you are travelling between October-March (high tourist season) and May-June, the Indian holiday season. Travel facilities are limited in relation to demand so prior bookings are a must.
- If travelling by air, you should include one or more trips by rail or road so that you can experience rural India. When planning your trip, it is a must to include an Indian festival in your itinerary, enhancing your Indian experience.
- English is spoken at almost all tourist centres, but we can also book Government-trained and approved language speaking guides (German, French, Spanish, Japanese, Italian or Russian). Tour guides will assist you not only in your sightseeing, but also help you understand India better.
- Do not wear footwear or shorts, sleeveless tops or revealing clothes inside Hindu, Sikh, Muslim or Jain places of worship. Both men and women need to keep their shoulders and legs covered, especially in temples and it is handy for women to carry a scarf they can use to cover their heads if necessary. Certain areas of temples are not open to Non-Hindus.
- Visitors should be wary of strangers. Do not walk in isolated spots on your own especially after dark.

The image features three hands reaching upwards towards a bright, glowing light source at the top center. The hands are positioned in a triangular arrangement: one on the left, one on the right, and one at the bottom center. The background is a soft, out-of-focus blue and white, suggesting a sky or a bright indoor space. The overall mood is one of hope, aspiration, and collective effort.
